Miller & Martin's Environmental Law attorneys counsels clients on a broad spectrum of land, air, water and waste issues, including the handling of complex compliance and enforcement matters, arising under local, state and federal environmental and natural resource laws and regulations.

Our Environmental Law attorneys assists clients with regulatory compliance, environmental litigation, and environmental due diligence and environmental escrow matters, as well as responding to Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and state environmental agency requests for information and notices of violation and other types of enforcement. Our attorneys also assist employers dealing with Workplace Environmental, Health & Safety concerns and OSHA investigations and enforcement.

Well qualified to deal with environmental issues, our attorneys stay abreast of regulatory hot buttons and help clients spot issues and proactively fix complicated problems to avoid entanglement with enforcement that can carry hefty, daily penalties for certain offenses and even prison time for responsible executives. We also help clients tread through enforcement challenges when the regulators do come knocking.

Our attorneys represent a wide variety of business and industry clients, including manufacturers, consumer products companies, trade associations, electric utility distributors, energy, real estate development and construction companies, financial services institutions, individual property owners, municipal governments and agricultural interests.
