Remote work is here to stay! As are labor market and employee retention challenges.

Join us for a discussion of the practical and legal implications of:

- Employing workers in states you otherwise have no facilities/operations.
- Complying with new leave, break, wage payment, and training laws which may apply in those states along with the tax ramifications of having workers in such states.
- “Real world” employee, recruitment, engagement, and retention practices – the good, the bad, and the ugly/ineffective!
- For some, the “advent” of transgender issues in the workplace – bathrooms, pronouns, and assisting your supervisors and other employees in appropriately interacting with transgender applicants and employees.
- Lingering employee requests for accommodations based on “what they were allowed to do/get by with during COVID.”
