Miller & Martin Adds Danish-Qualified Attorney Daniel Bang to Atlanta Corporate Practice

Posted in News on November 20, 2026

Miller & Martin PLLC announced that Daniel Emil Lindberg Bang has joined the firm's Atlanta office as Counsel in the Corporate group, strengthening the firm's capacity to serve clients with operations and disputes on both sides of the Atlantic.

Bang focuses his practice on international litigation, arbitration and cross-border corporate and commercial transactions throughout the United States and in Denmark and the Nordics. He represents clients in complex commercial disputes and advises on business transactions involving multinational operations, legal strategy, negotiations and risk management and U.S. and Danish corporate governance. He also represents companies in proceedings before the U.S. Federal Maritime Commission (FMC) and advises clients in the maritime industry.

His transactional work includes drafting and negotiating complex commercial agreements, among them intellectual property, software and licensing agreements, master service agreements for renewable energy projects, supply agreements and cross-border financing arrangements. He leads and supports mergers and acquisitions, including due diligence, transaction structuring and regulatory compliance.

"Daniel gives our clients something that is genuinely difficult to find in one attorney, which is the ability to move between U.S. and Danish law with equal command," said Mike Marshall, managing member of Miller & Martin's Atlanta office and vice chair of the firm's Corporate Department. "Companies doing business across borders don't want to assemble a patchwork of advisors in every jurisdiction. Daniel's addition means we can guide those transactions and disputes from Atlanta with real depth on both ends."

Bang is a licensed Danish attorney and is admitted to appear before the Danish High Court. He is also admitted to the Georgia and New York bars. He earned an LL.B. and LL.M. in Law from Copenhagen University Faculty of Law and an LL.M. in International Business Law from Stetson University College of Law. He was recently elected president of the Danish-American Chamber of Commerce Southeast.

"Atlanta's become a serious landing point for European companies building out U.S. operations, and Danish companies in particular are paying closer attention to the Southeast," Bang said. "Miller & Martin has been doing international work here for more than 30 years, and its role in the World Law Group means clients get local knowledge in the markets where they're actually operating. That combination is what drew me to the firm."

Miller & Martin's International Group has a long history of representing companies investing in the Southeast and coordinating litigation across foreign jurisdictions, including Denmark.

"We've built this practice around lawyers who understand how business is actually conducted in other countries, not just how it's described in a treatise," said Tom Harrold, chair of Miller & Martin's International/World Law Group practice. "Daniel qualified and practiced in Denmark before he practiced here. That perspective is valuable to Danish companies coming into this market and equally valuable to our American clients going the other direction."
